

The auto focus sensor uses ultrasonic technology. It sends a burst of sound waves around 300 KHz and then processes the received waves from the material that it bounces off of. If the material absorbs the waves then the sensor receiver will not detect anything or detect energy under the threshold value. Therefore we will have to check if the materials that you have listed in your email absorb sound waves of 300 KHz very well.